Submission by the Great Britain: Equality and Human Rights Commission, Northern Ireland (UK): Human Rights Commission, Scotland: Scottish Human Rights Commission

Statement on behalf of the Equality and Human Rights Commission of Great Britain, the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission and the Scottish Human Rights Commission.

For the panel discussion on promoting tolerance, inclusion, unity and respect for diversity in the context of combating racial discrimination.

Mr President

This is a statement on behalf of the Equality and Human Rights Commission of Great Britain, the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission and the Scottish Human Rights Commission.

The United Kingdom has signed and ratified the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, which includes obligations relating to hate crime.¹

We remain seriously concerned about increases in incidences of racially motivated hate crime in the UK in recent years, in particular following the EU referendum of June 2016 and recent terror attacks in England.²

The National Police Chief's Council reported a 57 per cent increase in reports of hate crime in the aftermath of the EU referendum.³ Race remains the most commonly recorded motivation for hate crime in 2016/17, at 78 per cent, and shows an increase of 27 per cent over the previous year.⁴

We are concerned that barriers to reporting and recording hate crime continue to exist across the UK. There are challenges with the existing legal framework, which has developed in a piecemeal fashion. The main provisions relied upon in legal proceedings in relation to online hate crime predate the era of mass social media use.

We call on the UK Government:^{5, 6, 7}

- a) To undertake a full-scale review of the legislation on hate crime without further delay. We suggest that any review of the legislation includes provisions on aggravated offences and the enhanced sentencing system, to ensure consistency across different protected characteristics;^{8, 9, 10}

We call on the UK and Scottish Governments:

- b) To ensure the legislation gives full consideration to the right to freedom of expression in private electronic communications;¹¹

¹¹ Article 19 (2) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights recognises that the right to freedom of expression is qualified, as per the following:

(3) The exercise of the rights provided for in paragraph 2 of this article carries with it special duties and responsibilities. It may therefore be subject to certain restrictions, but these shall only be such as are provided by law and are necessary:

(a) For respect of the rights or reputations of others;

(b) For the protection of national security or of public order (ordre public), or of public health or morals.

Article 10(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights places additional restrictions on freedom of speech, "...in the interests of ...territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, ... for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."

- c) To ensure that monitoring and data collection methods are consistent across the UK, to allow for comparative and chronological analysis;
- d) To evaluate reporting and recording processes used by the police and other agencies, in consultation with local communities;
- e) To implement a review of third-party reporting, to evaluate impact and sustainability, highlight geographical and thematic gaps and ensure consistency with police recording systems;¹² and
- f) To ensure police refer all victims of hate crimes and incidents to relevant support services. Such services should be adequately funded.

Thank you Mr President.

¹² The Scottish Government is looking at the value of third party reporting in the Lord Bracadale review mentioned in note 7.
